Introducing Redwood: A New Era for Oracle Cloud HCM

Oracle HCM has redefined the cloud user experience with the launch of Redwood, an initiative that breathes new life into its entire suite of solutions, including specialized sectors like Oracle Energy and Water. Redwood stands out as a comprehensive upgrade - it's not just a fresh coat of paint but a thoughtful redesign of the entire user interface, ensuring that every interaction is more intuitive, efficient, and pleasing to the eye.

Design and Functionality: A Seamless Blend

Redwood's new design elements include a palette of calming colors, modern icons, and clear, readable fonts. These elements are meticulously chosen to reduce visual fatigue and make navigation a breeze. The redesigned application toolbar now features avatar support, aligning perfectly with the rest of Oracle's product ecosystem. The most notable of Redwood's features, however, is the Unified Search. This tool revolutionizes the way users find information, offering hints and assistance as they type, leading to quicker and more accurate results.

Enhanced User Experience

Content visualization has been taken to the next level with the new zone layout controls, offering unparalleled flexibility in organizing information on-screen. The dashboard personalization is more dynamic than ever, with adjustable sizes and layouts that persist across sessions for a consistent experience. A key focus of Redwood is reducing 'mouse mileage,' enhancing the interface layout to minimize the physical effort required to navigate through tasks, thus saving time and reducing strain.

A Requirement for the Future

While new clients are encouraged to implement Redwood now, the expectation is all existing Oracle Customers HCM will adopt this state-of-the-art UI by summer of 2025.
